I believe that this matter ought to be settled immediately. It is a drain on the economy, and if one polled the many millions of users of msft products, I believe it would be difficult to justify that we were overcharged for an operating system that we freely chose (over Apple or Linux), and that we use every day, with additional features added at no extra charge. I still remember that I had to forgo getting Netscape because I did not want to spend hundreds of extra dollars--in the end, I got it free from msft.
